This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1904 Excerpt: ... is Sarah, Dowager Duchess of Somerset, who founded eighteen scholarships for persons educated at the Manchester, Hereford, and Marlborough Schools. 1511.--St. Johns College, Cambridge, founded by Lady Margaret, Countess of Richmond and Derby. The college succeeded the Hospital of St. John, founded in 1135, from which Hugh Balsham, Bishop of Ely, removed his scholars in 1284 to Peterhouse. The foundation consists of a master, fifty-six fellows, sixty scholars, and nine sizars. 1512.--St. Pauls School, St. Pauls Churchyard, London, established by Dean Golet. This school provided free education to one hundred and fifty-three poor children. Originally its income, derived from lands, was somewhat over a hundred pounds; now it approaches six thousand. The school has been transferred to West Kensington, and special attention is given to the preparation of candidates for army examinations. 1516.--Cobpus Christi College, Oxford, founded by Bishop Fox. This college was especially intended for the study of the Greek and Latin classics, and it still retains its original character. The library is a very fine one, and contains a splendid collection of early English manuscripts. 1519.--Magdalene College, Cambridge, founded by Lord Audley, of Audley End. A Benedictine School had occupied this site for over a century, but was closed on the suppression of the monasteries. This college is interesting as having been the alma mater of Samuel Pepys, the writer of the well-known diary. He left the whole of his library to his college, where it is still preserved intact. 1532.--Christ Church, Oxford, founded by King Henry VIII. The first projector of this was Cardinal Wolsey, and it was proposed to be called Cardinal College. Though still the largest of all the colleges, Wolsey...
