

How to see the World in a Weekend

If you travel where everyone else wants to go when everyone else wants to go there, you will spend more for your travel experiences, be no more interesting that you were last year and get very little value for your travel dollar. When you throw away the destination, you open up the possibility to see the world and travel like you never thought you could. If you have limited allotted travel time, like to travel on a budget without sacrificing style, and are open to just a few unique travel ideas, you're sure to be inspired with the information you'll find in How to see the World in a Weekend.
